In November, turnover in retail trade declined slightly by -0.8% on October (data in CVS-CJO volume). Sales of manufactured goods were up very slightly, at +0.1% compared with October, following a 0.9% decline the previous month. This near stability hides heterogeneous trends, with a sharp rise in the automotive equipment sector (+7.3% after -5.9%), and significant increases in household appliances (+3.2% after -3.1%) and textiles and clothing (+2.2% after +0.3%). In contrast, sales fell in the sports equipment (-9.4% after -3.0%), watches and jewellery (-3.0% after -4.6%) and furniture (-2.1% after -0.7%) sectors.

The volume of food sales continued to fall, by -2.0% over the month, following the slight decrease recorded in October (-0.6%).

With the exception of department stores (+0.7%), all other distribution channels reported lower sales in November, especially hypermarkets (-1.4%).

Over the past three months, both manufactured goods and food sales have fallen in volume terms compared with the previous three months (-0.8% and -0.1% respectively).
