Device Name: QuantumLink QX-500

Description: The QuantumLink QX-500 is an advanced, high-performance computational node designed for hybrid quantum-classical computing environments. It serves as a seamless bridge between conventional high-performance computing (HPC) clusters and emerging quantum processors, enabling faster and more efficient problem-solving across various industries.